

DEADLY MEDICINE: CREATING THE MASTER RACE

Date/Time: Tuesday April 12, 2011
5:00-8:00 p.m. Dinner and drinks will be served

Subject:

A distinguished group of experts will broadly examine the medical community's ethical responsibilities from both historical and contemporary perspectives. From 1933 to 1945, German physicians, scientists, public health officials, and academic experts played a critical role in supporting and implementing the Nazi racial hygiene policy. The experts will discuss the controversial ethical issues our society and the medical community are dealing with today. Balancing the needs of society as a whole with the rights of individuals, and the ethical responsibility of the Medical, Mental Health, Social Work, and Psychology professions will be explored.

Speakers will include:

- Danny Fischer, M.D, Holocaust survivor and Family Practitioner
- Patricia Heberer, Ph.D, Historian, Center for Advanced Holocaust Studies, United States Holocaust Memorial Museum
 - Dr. Heberer's lecture is sponsored by Maimonides Society and the Campus Outreach Lecture Program of the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum's Center for Advanced Holocaust Studies, supported by the generosity of Alan Solomon, MD.
- Marshall Kapp J.D, M.P.H. Director, Center for Innovative Collaboration in Medicine and Law, FSU College of Medicine
- Monte Finkelstein, Ph.D, Professor of History, Tallahassee Community College
- Daniel Maier-Katkin, Ph.D, Professor of Criminology, Florida State University
- Aline Kalbian, Ph.D, Professor of Religious Ethics and Medical Ethics, Florida State University
